

TO OUR FRIENDS

We owe you an apology: It is with considerable regret that we are so late with this issue. The many requests and complaints indicate the interest in our Bulletin. Unfortunately, the facilities for its publication in the present form are so limited, that we were compelled, not only to delay this issue, but also to combine the third and fourth issue in a double-number which finishes the current Volume III. This will be the last time the Bulletin will appear in its present form.

We had planned, originally, to refrain from increasing our publishing activities for the duration. However, as we cannot continue to planograph the Bulletin, and as we feel that it should not be discontinued, we shall have it printed. This would also enable us to double or triple the circulation, to approach libraries, and to have it on the shelves of bookstores.

During this war period we cannot assure regular dates of issues, but each volume will contain four. Notices in detail will be sent as soon as the next issue is ready. We count on the help and assistance of our friends and co-workers who can facilitate the printing of the first issue by early subscriptions. Those who are in a position to do so may subscribe to several copies, for distribution amongst friends and professional persons whom you want to interest in Individual Psychology.

We have received suggestions to furnish information about literature. At the present time we have available: Back issues of the International Journal of Individual Psychology and the IP Bulletin; Alfred Adler, What Life Should Mean to You, Understanding Human Nature, Problems of Neurosis. If you have material or re-prints for sale or distribution, please notify us. Until the new issue,

R. D.
